About Guster

Formed in 1991 when the founding members were undergraduates at Tufts University, Guster has built a devoted following over the past three decades, releasing eight studio albums of enduring, quirky pop-rock songs like “Overexcited,” “Amsterdam,” “Satellite,” and “Do You Love Me” and touring nationally and internationally. The band last performed at Tanglewood in 2013.

Guster is known for keeping its sound fresh and for its use of humor and environmental advocacy to build lasting connections with audiences. The band is comprised of three founding members: Adam Gardner (lead guitar, vocals); Ryan Miller (lead vocals, guitar, bass and piano); and Brian Rosenworcel (drums); along with Luke Reynolds (guitar) who first toured with the band in 2010 and has played on their last two albums.

Following the release of their 2019 album, Guster’s drummer Rosenworcel said, “With Look Alive the plan is simple. Grow our musical community. Write better and better songs. Keep our minds open. Never repeat ourselves and create a legacy of music that is undeniable.”
